1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the
 2. various methods which have been proposed for the determination of
 3. the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule. The
 4. most common method is the use of a stopped-flow apparatus,
 5. which allows the reaction to be initiated and the rate of
 6. reaction to be measured over a very short period of time.
 7. Other methods include the use of a laser flash photolysis
 8. apparatus, which allows the reaction to be initiated by a
 9. short pulse of light, and the rate of reaction to be measured
 10. by the change in the intensity of the light.

11. The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the 12. various factors which influence the rate of reaction between a
 13. radical and a molecule. These factors include the nature of the 14. radical, the nature of the molecule, the temperature, and the
 15. concentration of the reactants.
